New National Executive Officer for Relationships Australia

Relationships Australia has appointed a new National Executive Officer, Mr Nick Tebbey.

Chair of the Relationships Australia Board, Dr Ian Law, said the organisation was delighted to welcome Mr Tebbey to the role.

“Mr Tebbey comes to the organisation from the Settlement Council of Australia where he was CEO, but he is already well known to the organisation having previously served as a legal representative for Relationships Australia,” Dr Law said.

“In his former role at Australia’s peak body for settlement service delivery, Mr Tebbey focused on policy development and advocacy where he fostered strong working relationships with government departments and a range of other stakeholders in the community sector.

“Nick is delighted to have the opportunity to take the next step in his career at Relationships Australia, and is looking forward to working with the Board, Committee of CEOs and the team in the National Office as we progress the work of the Federation,” Dr Law said.

Mr Tebbey’s appointment follows the departure of long-serving National Executive Officer Alison Brook who has been in the role for nine years.

“Ms Brook made a significant contribution to the development and growth of policy and programs delivered by Relationships Australia organisations across Australia in her time working in the national office and she will no doubt continue to focus on supporting vulnerable people and their families and communities in her new role as CEO of Relationships Australia Canberra and Region,” Dr Law said.

Mr Tebbey starts in the role on 4 February, 2019.
